RELIGION IS FADING

Rabbi Fleicher of Boston Causes
Surprise in his Greenacre
Address

Rabbi Charles Fleischer of Boston, the foremost reform Jew in the United States, and one of the most enlightened students of Judaism in the world, closed the religious colony, was terminated and summer meetings of the Mosaicists, the followers of Sarah J. Farmer and Mrs. Ole Bull are now departing for their homes.

Rabbi Fleischer, who is known principally because of his radical statements, said among other things that a religion—the combination of Christianity and Judaism is the population of more than one-third the people of the United States, but that the Hebrew system is gradually going out of existence. "One hundred years will see the end of it in America," he said. "A new religiousness is developing."

"I do not believe in revealed religion," said the rabbi. "That is to say I do not believe that some greater man, God, a man magnified being, communicated to us what His will and desire are. That is an interesting conception, but it never could

Hurricane Sweeps South Coast-- Big Damage at Charleston, S. C.

Torpedo Boats Washed Ashore

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 29—The fury of the northeast storm which raged along the south coast today and yesterday resulted in the deaths of 11 persons in Charleston county and caused a damage now estimated at about $1,000,000.

Streets and yards were inundated by the abnormal tides. Telephones and telegraph wires were put out of commission.

Many families were rendered practically destitute. The Red Cross society at once offered its assistance to those in need of aid.

Reports from the sea announce that many steamers and schooners were in peril, but no less of life has been reported.

The gale in this city was terrific. The wind tore slate roofs from the houses and inundated the cellars of many houses.

Six torpedo boats in the navy yard at this port were wrenched from their moorings and tossed about like toys in a child's nursery. Many buildings in the navy yard were wrecked. The commandant of the yard has asked for $20,000.

Washington, Aug. 29—Reports to the weather bureau at Washington from storm-bound points in the south are still meager. The storm centre has passed westward and southward, and was this morning over the west central portion of Georgia. The intensity of the wind had greatly diminished, and weather bureau officials believe the storm has neared its end.

The bureau was unable today to get in touch with Jacksonville, Fla., Savannah, Ga., or other coast points. The report from Savannah of Monday's weather was received this morning having been forwarded part of the way by mail. It showed that Savannah had a northwest wind of 41 miles an hour yesterday, with an abnormally low barometer, 29.2 inches.

Charleston, S. C., reported conditions returning to the normal today, with a rising barometer and falling wind. Storms similar to this one, which originated off the coast and has passed into the interior, occasionally revive after they reach interior points, but weather bureau officials believe the present one is going to pieces.

REPUTATION COUNTS IN THIS!

You can't tell much about rugs by their appearance.

You have to depend on the trade-mark and the honesty of the man who sells them to you.

The rug business is full of "trade names." There are "body brussels" and "near body brussels," and "almost body brussels" and a score of other less obvious variations.

You can't tell by first looks which is the $15.00 rug and which is the $25.00 one. That's where our reputation is worth something to you and to us.

Our big stock of rugs is on the second floor. Look our line over before purchasing.

WILL PLAY CONCORD ON SEPT. 9

Indications are that two A. C. of the Sunset league of this city and the Haymakers of Concord will meet in Concord on Saturday Sept. 9. The management of the P. A. C. is busy with arrangements for this first game and there is no small amount of interest in both cities by the fans. It is expected now that a special train will carry the local team and rooters to the capital city on that date with reduced fare.

A narrow escape from sinking after a collision was reported by the schooner Rebecca Palmer, on her arrival here today, bound from Sewall's Point, Va., for Portsmouth. The Palmer and the six master Edward of Winslow, the latter bound for a coal port without cargo, collided (when about forty-five miles south southwest of Montauk point, early Sunday morning. The Palmer was struck amidships on the starboard side. The Winslow's jibboom carried away the Palmer's main rigging cutting her hull down to within two planks of the water's edge. Eight inches lower and the big schooner would have gone to the bottom.

The Palmer's damages were patched temporarily and she reached here today under her own sail. The Winslow is thought to be not much damaged.

Vessels Come Together Off Cape Cod This Morning

Boston, Mass., August 30—The schooner Dorothy B. Barrett bound from Portsmouth for Newport News, was in collision this morning with the torpedo boat destroyer Mayrant, bound from Newport, R. I., to Boston.

The torpedo boat arrived at the Boston navy yard this noon. She was to assist at the aviation meet in connection with the flights over the harbor.

ALLOW MAINE TO REST

Money Available Will not Com- plete Work of Removing Battleship Wreck

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30—As much of the wrecked battleship Maine as the available funds will permit will be removed or prepared for removal from Havana harbor, it was made known today, and then the mammoth cofferdam surrounding the ruins will be refilled with water to await an additional appropriation by Congress to finish the raising operations. Congress failed to act upon the President's request for an additional $250,000, and the war department has mapped out its plans for the expenditure of the money on hand, which probably will be exhausted by the time Congress convenes in December.

Because of the lack of funds even funeral services over the recovered remains of the dead and the erection in Arlington national cemetery of the mast of the ill-fated vessel as a monument to them must be postponed. The remains and the mast will be sent to the cemetery to be stored there until Congress acts.

The terribly wrecked forward part of the vessel, at about two-thirds of it will be cut down to the levels already reached by pumpage, then taken out and dumped into deep water outside Havana harbor. A small cofferdam will be built inside the main cofferdam to a depth of about forty feet around the forward part, in order to extricate the rest of it later. The one-third after portion of the vessel, it is believed, can be floated. It will be pumped out and bulkheaded, but not moved pending the appropriation of more money.

WHAT WE SAY IS SO

ADMIRAL TOGO
GUEST OF SEATTLE

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 28.—The final celebration on American soil in honor of Admiral Togo took place here tonight when one hundred business men sat with him at a banquet given him by the Chamber of Commerce and the Commercial Club. Admiral Togo reiterated his appreciation of the courtesies extended him, and his gratitude for the good will shown him as a representative of Japan.

Seated with the Americans at the table were many prominent Japanese, among them Commander Iitaga, naval attaché to the Japanese Embassy at Washington, Consul-General Kakumura of Ottawa, Ont., Consul Yada of Vancouver, B. C., and representatives of the Japanese associations of California and Oregon. Mayor George A. Dilling presided, and toasts were responded to by Rear-Admiral W. H. H. Southland, commander of the second division of the Pacific fleet; Judge Thomas Burke and Consul Takahashi.

Admiral Togo spoke in his native tongue and his address was translated by Commander Taniguchi, his aide. He said:

"On the eve of my departure from your hospitable shores I am happy to take advantage of this occasion to say once more that nothing could be more cordial than the reception which your Government, as well as all classes of your people, have been so good as to accord me everywhere I visited as the guest of the nation during my stay in your great republic. Especially I have been deeply impressed and exceedingly gratified by the great honor President Taft was pleased to confer upon me in your capital city of Washington.

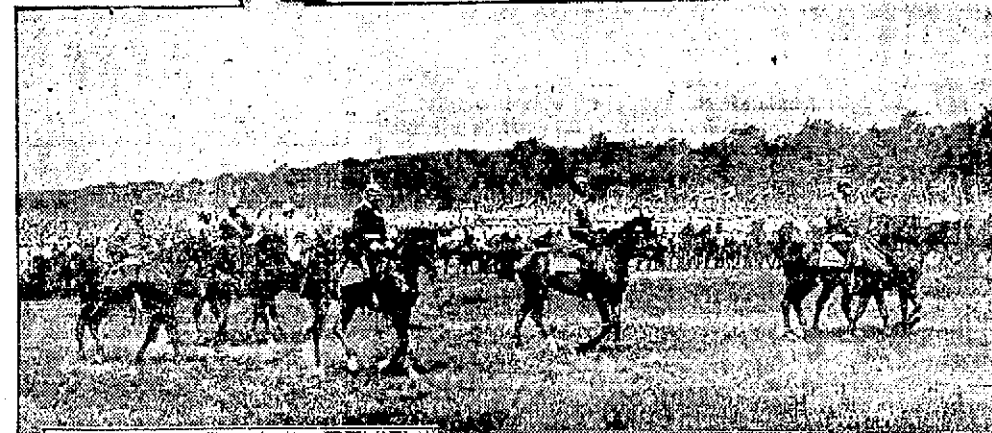

"Although I have already bidden farewell officially to your Government and people, your hospitable citizens of Seattle have been so good and so kind as not to allow me to pass this city as a private person, and I feel that I am still the guest of the nation today. Moreover, I have learned that the Government will be good enough to do me a great honor once again in giving me an escort of a squadron under the command of Admiral Southland upon my departure from this port tomorrow morning.

Decisive Point Near In the Negotiations
Between France and Germany Over Morocco.

EMPEROR WILLIAM LEADING CAVALRY CHARGE

PRESIDENT FALLIERES

GERMAN ARMY IN REVIEW

France and Germany are carrying on war preparations because of the Moroccan affair, and each appears willing that the other should know it. Whether there is to be war depends upon the terms which France puts forward. Her ultimatum is ready and is understood to be an offer of certain parts of the French Congo to Germany if the latter will absolutely recognize France's rights in Morocco.

"For all these honors, hospitality and friendship I fail to find words which may give adequate expression to my feelings of profound gratitude. I can only say, however, that it is my most pleasant duty to carry home with me these evidences of great good will shown toward me by your Government and people, and I can assure you that their doubtless will be highly appreciated, not only by my Government, but by the whole Japanese nation."

PORTLAND
DERAILED

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Aug. 29.—Dirt washed upon the tracks at the railroad crossing in East St. Johnsbury by last night's storm caused the wreck of the night express from Portland, Me. to Montreal on the St. Johnsbury & Lake Champlain Railroad today. While none of the passengers or train crew was seriously injured, the seventy-five passengers were badly shaken up and Engineer E. A. Humphrey and Fireman H. W. Jackman were injured. The engine and tender ploughed along the track for a distance of two hundred feet and then fell over a twenty-foot embankment. The front trucks on the baggage car were torn off and the baggage car was derailed. The first sleeping car left the iron but the other cars two day coaches and two sleepers, remained on the rails. After leaving the iron the first sleeper partly turned over on its side. The passengers in this car were hurt from their berths, but except for a few cuts and bruises were not injured. The rear cars remained on the iron, but the passengers were thrown to the floor of the cars by the sudden stop.

Engineer Humphrey was caught beneath the engine when it fell down the embankment, and for a time it was feared that he had suffered fatal injuries. Digging away the dirt from beneath the engine where Humphrey was imprisoned, the passengers and train crew were soon able to reach the man, and in a little time rescued him. An examination showed that his injuries were not of a serious nature. Fireman Jackman was thrown out of the engine cab, when the engine left the rails but was not seriously hurt by his fall.

A MUCH NEEDED LAW

New York, Aug. 29.—The police estimate that the number of New York city householders having in their homes a revolver is about 500,000. Besides these reputable citizens there are fully 150,000 undesirable—thugs, highwaymen, rowdies, etc., who have firearms and who make a practice of carrying them.

To all of these persons Commissioner Waldo gives warning that but three days remain in which to get rid of the weapons, procure a license for having them in their possession or take the consequences if they are found out by the authorities. For on Sept. 1 the Sullivan act in relation to the sale and carrying of such weapons goes into effect, and the police will enforce it strictly.

Briefly here are the principal provisions of the act and the penalties: Any person having in his possession a pistol revolver or other firearm of a size that may be concealed upon the person, without a license, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Any person who shall have or carry concealed upon his person, any pistol, revolver or other firearm, without a license, shall be guilty a felony.

Any person not a citizen of the United States who shall carry arms or any dangerous weapon in any public place at any time shall be guilty of a felony.

Any person who attempts to use against another or who carries and possesses any instrument or weapon of the kind known as blackjack, sunshot, billy &c., or who carries or possesses a dagger, dirk knife, &c., is guilty of a felony.

In plain language this means that no person will be allowed to carry a pistol on the highway without a license after Sept. 1. If he has a pistol in a bureau drawer or under the pillow or stored away in a trunk he is guilty of a misdemeanor. Being only a misdemeanor, the police cannot search one's house for it without a warrant.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Board of Public Works of the City of Portsmouth, N. H., until August 31, 1911, for 30 tons of loose or baled hay (loose preferred) delivered at City Stables in 5 ton lots as ordered.

HOWELLS HAPPY WHEN AT KITTERY POINT HOME

Kittery people doubt, and with good reason, if their most distinguished summer neighbor will find in the vales and mountains of his ancestral Wales, to which he has gone this season a spot more charming than that which he left behind at the "Point." For while William Dean Howells is a New Yorker for a portion of the year he feels most at home at Kittery Point, Me. The visitor, sure of a warm welcome from Mr. Howells when at the "Point," leaves the railroad station at Kittery and walks along a country road for about a mile until one comes upon a picturesque old estate, with a windmill in the yard. The gate stands hospitably ajar, inviting one to enter and pass along the grass-bordered gravel path that leads to the entrance door of a quaint old-fashioned homestead, almost hidden from view of the main road by the masses of shrubbery which surround it.

The estate was originally owned by Admiral Craven, commander in the U. S. navy during the civil war, who was killed while aboard the iron clad Teumessah, which was destroyed by a torpedo in Mobile bay in August, 1864.

The house faces the harbor and commands a superb view of the ocean. It remains practically unchanged from the date of its erection, and while it can lay little or no claim to real artistic beauty, yet it is a comfortable, homelike abode, with quaint and pretty surroundings.

The estate is not a large one, comprising only about an acre of ground, but it is charmingly laid out on old-fashioned lines. To the right of the entrance gate is a delightful old-time garden, fragrant with the perfumes of heliotrope, mignonette, and all the old-fashioned sweet-smelling favorites, laid out in quaint, little box-bordered beds, a hedge of evergreen at the rear forming a pretty background.

Here originally stood the barn, which has been removed to a point a short distance to the right of the house. It has been converted into a most attractive study, where Mr. Howells spends part of each day in pursuit of the literary muse.

Everywhere about the grounds are to be found fine trees, some of which have been standing for more than a century, while others were planted by the author himself when he first purchased the estate several years ago.

Beyond this garden stands the old windmill one of the first objects to attract the attention of a visitor. Its base is almost hidden from view by the clambering vines of the rambler rose which have been trained to grow about it, and which in the season of blossoming make a most effective showing.

To the left, a path leads to the homestead, whose yellow exterior with white trimmings contrasts prettily with the surrounding green.

On the opposite side a stretch of meadow land sweeps to the water's edge, from which point is obtained a very fine view of Portsmouth harbor and the lighthouse at Gorham island. A much-worn footpath leads along the shore line to a pier, with seats placed on either side, where Mr. Howells delights to spend much leisure time, enjoying the cool ocean breezes while feasting his eyes on the ever-changing beauty of the sea.

On the slope of a hill just beyond the study and not far from the house with its detached kitchen lies the vegetable garden, which is the one of Mr. Howells, and which gives evidence of the great care bestowed upon it by the author-gardener, who has sold charge of it, and who delights to spend considerable of his leisure time in its cultivation. There is a friendly rivalry between Mr. Howells and his daughter in regard to their gardens, her pride centering in the plot of land allotted to her use, wherein thrive quaint beds of pretty flowers, and his in the quality and quantity of the products of his vegetable patch.

Mr. Howells' study, or literally workshop, stands just at the left of the house, and is reached by a narrow footpath, bordered by trees on one side and on the other by pretty beds of tiger lilies, gladioli and flowering shrubs, which lend a touch of bright coloring to the surrounding green. A broad veranda has been constructed across the front of this one-time barn, and from here is obtained a delightful view of the nearby ocean, dotted at intervals with the white sails of various craft.

The original carriage door was preserved in the process of remodeling more as a memento than anything else, although the entire exterior was but little altered. The interior of course, was considerably changed. It consists of one large room, rendered light and sunny by means of the windows that have been inserted. It is high studded and the walls and ceiling are sheathed in pine and shellacked.

Low, open bookcases built around the sides of the room are filled to repletion with books of all sizes, many of them being the works of Mr. Howells' friends and acquaintances in the literary world, where he has earnestly labored for more than 50 years, and where his efforts have been crowned with well merited success. Many of the volumes are autograph copies, and a considerable number have been dedicated to him by friends in loving remembrance.

At one end of the room is a large fireplace, faced with brick over which extends a long, ornamental mantel, on which repose many photographs of personal friends, as well as odd, artistic bits of bric-a-brac.

A fog in the wall beside the fireplace forms a space sufficiently large for Mr. Howells' desk to fit in.

Scattered about the room are numerous mementos of travel in foreign lands, and gifts of various friends, as well as pictures and remembrances of his deceased daughter, Winifred, who was very dear to her father's heart and who inherited his love of writing, which was a bond of comradeship between them.

A large art square awning in front of the fireplace but partially covers the hardwood polished floor. Several chairs are placed at intervals about the room while two large tables occupy the centre of the apartment. One of these is solid mahogany, originally belonged to Admiral Craven and is now used as a receptacle for magazine, of which there is a generous selection.

In one corner of the study stands an interesting old clock, which was manufactured by one of Mr. Howells' ancestors many years ago and was obtained by him after considerable difficulty. It is beautiful specimen of the old grandfather type of clock and is much prized by its present owner.

After devoting the morning to work Mr. Howells spends the remainder of the day in rest and recreation. In his younger days long tramps through the woods were his special delight, and he would willingly forfeit a drive any time he could walk, never having been addicted to the use of horse and carriage, or, in fact, of any pleasure vehicle, but now he is content to spend the summer afternoons resting on the pier, reading chatting with his friends beneath the shade of the great trees on the lawn or working in his vegetable patch.

Near by is a very old mulberry tree, of which the author-poet is very fond, and which recalls to mind one of his sweetest poems entitled "The Mulberries," while a short distance beyond at one side of the house, is a most attractive bush, much valued by the author for association's sake. It has grown from a tiny slip and was given to him by Sarah Orne Jewett out of her own garden.

The whole tenor of his life confirms his high ideals as set forth in his books. He is frank and generous in his manners and unassuming in his thoroughly appreciates all that is worth while in human nature; and there are no traits of egotism, selfishness or greed in his make-up. In short, he is a gentleman of the old school. His love of nature and simplicity of character are constantly revealed in his poetry, just as his ready humor and sparkling wit are evidenced in his farces.

Newspaper work was the scene of his earliest labors, and its holds decided views as to its value for training the field of literature. His first poetic compositions appeared in his father's newspapers, which later he himself edited. For awhile he was correspondent for the New York Tribune and also for the New York Times, and later became editor of the Atlantic Monthly, which position he held for nine years.

At this summer home he is fortunate in the possession of desirable neighbors. Next door lives a grandson of Commodore Decatur, who has proved to be a most agreeable companion, and but a short distance away resides George Wasson, the well-known writer of sea tales, and one of Mr. Howells' most intimate friends. It was while visiting Mr. Wasson's house that he first became interested in the natural beauty of Kittery and its peaceful calm. The Craven homestead was for sale at the time and he purchased it. It has proved to be what he searched for through years—a restful summer home, far removed from the bustle of city life, a place where undisturbed he might pursue his literary work.

The Elks are to play the River-sides of Kittery on Labor Day morning. Houghton and Derolun are the battery for the Elks.

LITERARY NOTES

Merry Del Val

Vance Thompson, in an article entitled "Who Shall Rule as Pope of Rome" in the September Hampton's gives the following pen picture of the Pope's secretary of state.

"He is forty-six years old, Merry del Val—the youngest of cardinals, almost a boy among these ancients of eighty, ninety, nearly a hundred years. That he was born in London, you know. There is saving Irish blood in him and grave Spanish blood. Perhaps he is the one foreign cardinal whom the Italians really love—He is their type—a rapier of a man. He is more modern than their temporal king—at twenty paces he can put a rifle bullet through the king's head on a one-lira piece of silver. He is the best golf player in Rome. He it was who puts lifts, electric lights, telephones typewriters, filing cabinets in the ancient Vatican."

The September Columbian

Senator Joseph Bristow, of Kansas, in his forceful vein tells how Big Business is aiding in the running of national affairs in an article on "How the Interests Control America" in the September Columbian Magazine. It's a big question and Senator Bristow handles his subject in an able manner. There are some excellent illustrations by John T. McCutcheon the famous cartoonist.

"Bohemia" is a place much talked about, but few know it. Harris Merton Lyon has lived in and studied New York's Bohemia, which he calls "The Land of Talk." It is a humorous snappy story. It tells bluntly just what Bohemia with its moral looseness, means to the stranger and incidentally points to a strong moral lesson without being a preachment.

The stage struck young girl of woman should by all means read "An Actor's Wife" in the September number of the Columbian. It is a story of heart throbs and shows effectively that life on the stage is not the easy-going joyous life we imagine it is from the plush orchestra chairs. It is a story that rings true because it is written by one who knows.

Most of us have often wondered just what the true reformer's mental attitude is toward his most caustic critics. "Poker Fighting" is one of the

NEW CASTLE

There is yet no principal sign of the season coming to an end for all the hotels and cottages are still full and as one departs another takes his place, and the outlook is that there will be a good rush well into September. People in search of bright blue skies and sunshiny weather are advised to delve into poetry. That is the only place it can be found for any length of time this week. To be sure the weather has been depressing but just think of the splendid days that preceded it and of the glorious ones just ahead.

DAY BY DAY.
Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities creep in. Forget them. Tomorrow is a new day. You shall begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be incumbered with your old nonsense.

POSTAL SERVICE IMPAIRED
Postmaster General Hitchcock may have saved the government some money but he has, if the people of this section are any judges greatly impaired the efficiency of the service. The closing of postoffices on Sunday to business men and the curtailment of collections may have saved a few dollars but it is not popular. The service in New England is way off and there appears to be a general slow down all along the line. There is lack of interest by the employees and a general don't care. Why is it?

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS
Divorce comes into Upton Sinclair's life to show the flaws in his Utopia.

The boys who deserted the school-ship Ranger to come home in the stockade of a liner, went almost literally out of the frying pan into the fire.

The former Socialist editor who has been jailed for assailing President Taft in print will of course consider himself a martyr and a' that.

Rather unfortunate that two bad accidents should immediately follow the returning Chamber of Commerce delegates' declaration that American railroads far exceed European.

The Woburn city auditor who has kept his marriage secret for six months nevertheless could not be punished for suppression of the city's accounts.

A steamer has arrived in Boston with 53 ostriches which were smuggled out of Africa by a Pennsylvania man in defiance of French, English and German laws. Their owner may be said to have won by 53 necks.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

Kaiser Wilhelm in an address to the people of Hamburg told them that he "assumes" they wish him to have a navy so strengthened that "no one can dispute with us the place that is our due." In view of the dispute going on with France over the situation in Morocco, this is assuming much. But no indisputable navy is any longer possible, however eager the Kaiser may be to have it, however willing the Hamburgers may be to pay for it.
On the day that preceded the speech of the Kaiser there was launched in the United States for Argentina, one of the smaller sea powers of the globe, a warship larger than any other in the world. There is now under consideration at Washington a plan projected by naval authorities for the construction of a warship to exceed the Argentine monster. It is estimated to cost $15,000,000.
What will these big ships be worth to the Kaiser or to his rivals?
A British authority on naval matters recently pointed out that under present conditions it would be impossible for a fleet to be maintained in time of war anywhere on the narrow sea between England or Scotland and the Continent, because of the menace of submarines and torpedoes that could be launched from land stations. Recent tests made by our own Government show that we have torpedoes that can destroy a ship seven miles from the point from which the torpedo was launched.
But in the near future the aeroplane will be more formidable than the submarine. Mr. Edison recently declared that it virtually puts an end to war. A thousand airships cost less than a single Dreadnought. They can be operated over a radius of five hundred miles and at a rate of speed that would leave a battleship like a snail.
The United States is now shooting to pieces the great battleship Texas that a few years ago was a pride of the navy. In a little while, measured by the life of a nation, every other big battleship will be as absolute as the Texas was yesterday.—New York World.

BIG DAY FOR OWLS
The second annual outing of Portsmouth Order of Owls will be at Dover Point, Sept. 2. A shore dinner and athletic games, in which the members will be pitted against their single brothers at base ball, will be the features of the outing. William W. Wallace, Charles Shuffelburg, Herbert B. Dow, Andrew O. Caswell, Timothy Quill, Fred J. O'Brien, Samuel Hardy, Frank A. Moore, George A. Tripp, J. W. Bruce and George M. Ayers constitute the committee in charge.

SAYS THERE IS NOTHING TO IT

Western papers are giving much space to a report that Clarkson Potter of St. Louis who is stopping at Batchelders hotel, Little Boars Head issued a challenge for a duel with Count de la Forrest Divonne at Pinar, France because of discourtesy shown Mrs. Potter at a reception in France. The report had it that after both parties appointed second two representatives to arrange the duel they got together and called it off.
Mr. Potter on Tuesday denied most emphatically that there was no foundation for the report and that there was no trouble whatever with Count de la Forrest Divonne.
ONE for Fore River Two for Bath. Acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop today announced the awards for the torpedo boat destroyers provided for in the naval appropriation bill passed last March.
The Fore River ship building company of Quincy will build one. The contract price is $777,500. The Bath iron works of Bath, Me., will build two at $761,500 each.
Delivery is to be made in each case twenty-four months after the contract is let.
William Cramp and Sons company of Philadelphia also will build four of the vessels at $756,000 each, and the New York shipbuilding company at Camden, N. J., one at $777,500.
Each of the destroyers will be of 1010 tons displacement, and must be able to make 20 1/2 knots an hour. They will be finished and delivered within two years. The new vessels will be propelled by combination turbine and reciprocating engines.

CLEANING UP DAY

Next Friday, Sept. 1, is designated as "cleaning up day" in this state. The new law prohibiting the destruction or defacement of milestones, guideposts, etc., and the defacement of trees and buildings with advertisements, without the owners' written consent, goes into effect. The object of this law is to restore the beauty of the prospect along the roads of the state. The money paid for most of this roadside advertising is simply thrown away. The defacement of the landscape angers people. An advertisement that annoys more than it allures is an unprofitable investment.
The good roads committee of the Automobile Club of America is going to make a function of the clean up. Fifty automobile clubs of the state are to take part in the destruction of disfiguring signs which have not been removed before the law goes into effect. It is good work. It will be a pleasure to have the highways freed from caricatures needless warnings and vain boasts in big letters.—New York Times.

GRATITUDE OF TOGO

It is Expressed to President Taft Cordial Message Received at Beverly Today

Beverly, Aug. 29—President Taft received today a cordial message from Admiral Togo, who is in Seattle about to sail for Japan. The telegram follows:
"Pray accept my heartfelt thanks for your kind farewell messages. Allow me to express again, Mr. President, my deepest gratitude for the great honor which you have done me and my highest appreciation of the most cordial and friendly welcome which your government and people have so kindly accorded me during my stay in this country.
"I only regret that my present visit has been so much limited. I wish you good health and prosperity."

ROBERTS—BURNHAM

Marriage of Instructor in Agriculture in Boston Parental School at Durham, N. H., is Announced.

Many friends and acquaintances of George Filmore Roberts instructor in agriculture in the Boston parental school at West Roxbury will be interested in his marriage to Miss Mary Langley Burnham, daughter of Mrs. Lydia A. Burnham, at the latter's home in Durham, N. H., yesterday noon.
The ceremony was performed under a bell of asters by Rev. Theodore Laisne. The bride was given in marriage by her mother and the bride and groom were attended by Miss Esther V. Burnham and A. H. Brown of Ettaford, N. H. Miss Hannah W. Haines played the wedding march. The bride was gowned in embroidered chiffon over duchess satin, with tulle veil and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The bride is a graduate of Robinson Seminary and of a western college and has been employed at the New Hampshire experimental station. Mr. Roberts is a graduate of Browster Academy and New Hampshire College in the class of '11. After a wedding trip the couple will reside in West Roxbury.
There is every indication that the drought has been broken. Nearly eight inches of rain in August is somewhat of a record.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY
Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

Sliver. Bars.—The Charlestown, Mass., Advertiser states that a few days since, several scow loads of mud were dredged from Tea Wharf in Boston. A boy rummaging in the mud for hidden treasure, found an old Spanish quarter and a silver bar two or three inches long, and about an inch wide. His success induced others to search and about thirty bars, similar to the first, were found.
Some unknown Greenland friends of Private Jeremiah K. Mahoney of Co. K, 2nd Reg. N. H. V. now at Camp Union near Washington have presented him with an elegant revolver for which he wishes to return his thanks through the Chronicle.

The statement that news had been received at Washington indicating the speedy and certain recognition of the Confederates by England is unfounded. On the contrary, the indications are that all the European governments intend to continue to respect the blockade and await the result of the conquest.

Letters have been received in this city from Charles Ridge, a member of Co. K, Second N. H. Regiment who was supposed to have been killed at the Battle of Bull Run. He writes as follows from Richmond Va.—under the date of Aug. 10:—"I am well and a prisoner of war at Richmond. I am used well and in the hands of gentlemen. I never expected to leave the battlefield alive. I think there must be over one thousand wounded and all here. A good many have died and more will, but not from want of care, for the doctors here use them kindly and do all they can for them." He stated that letters to members of Co. K, Second Regiment, N. H. V., should be addressed to Richmond Va.

ELECTRICITY KILLS BUG PESTS

Spokane, Washington, Aug. 28.—Electricity as an agency to destroy the coding moth and other bug pests is the latest innovation introduced in modern apple orcharding in the Spokane Valley, where W. M. Frost of Opportunity, Wash., and J. C. Lawrence, a practical grocer of Spokane, have made what is declared to have been the first demonstration of its kind in the world. The test was made in a six-year-old orchard and more than a score of second-brood moths and many green aphids were killed in a few moments.
The apparatus consists of a storage battery to charge the incandescent light globes, each of six candle-power, which are netted with fine steel wire, coated with copper and tin, alternately. Attracted by the bright lights in the trees, to which the globes are carried at the ends of a covered wire, the moths fly against the netting complete the electric circuit and are instantly killed, the bodies falling into a receptacle placed beneath the globe.
Mr. Frost estimates that one battery to an acre of trees will keep the moths under control thus eliminating the usual spraying and saving many dollars annually for help, equipment and fluid. He is now preparing to wire his orchard of ten acres, containing 7000 trees, and several neighbors witnessed the initial test, are doing likewise. It is reported that several thousand acres of bearing apple trees will be equipped with exterminators by next spring.
If commercial electric-light wires are extended to the orchard tracts, as they are in many of the valleys in Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana, the expense of batteries may be saved by making direct connection. The cost of covering the globes with wire nets is a small item and any electrician can do the work.

WHERE DO WE GO?

Where do we go when life is ended, When from these regions we depart?
The hope on which we have depended Of a hereafter, when the heart Has ceased its throbbing, shall it surely
In higher realms be realized? Or is one's faith but insecurely Upheld by fancy disguised?
Well might the patriarch have wondered Who asked the question, now, as then Momentous, and have on it pondered: "If a man die shall he again Yet live?" Is it not early teaching, Which chiefly holds in leath one's faith?
Whose influences, so far-reaching, Are oft abiding until death?
There is no death; it's but transition; The good a heaven truly find; The wicked ever to perdition, The Christian says, are there consigned.
The Mussulman sees as stuccoed A heaven different conceives Awaits the Faithful who have clearly Their title proved. So each believes.

And do these tend to raise the curtain Concealing what's beyond the grave?
And is there anything that's certain Above the firmamental nave, That should all doubt and all misgiving,
While on this planet, set at rest As prove the dead shall be the living In other world entitled Blest?
And where are those reputed regions Containing heavens various To which have gone the countless legions
Whose after fate who can discuss With certainty? The mist is a fauce To one's horizon seem to cling, And what confounded early sages Perplexes still both hind and king.
Men have believed from the Creation In after life, yet in a way That doubt has scarcely had cessation
Since the world's dawn until today, Each creed has surely not its heaven, From all the others different, Else those beliefs to mankind given Lack truth's essential element.

ONE ON HIRAM HAYES

A Massachusetts man came forward with the story that in his garden he has got corn with ears as long as his arm, cabbages as large as a warship and carrots two and a half feet long that measure a foot around the top. That sounds like a California irrigation story, but the man asserts he is telling the truth. He says his ground is rather hard, but mellow enough for corn.

MAYOR BADGER ORDERS HEARING

The Board of Public Works wants Rockland street changed at Richards avenue and have petitioned the mayor and council relative to the same. Mayor Badger in turn has ordered that the city council give a public hearing on the matter on Sept. 18 at 11 a. m. in the council chamber. The plan is to straighten the highway owing to the paving of Richards avenue where it crosses.

The Herald Hears

Will Remember His Cordial Greetings In America

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 29.—Home-bound, Admiral Count Togo, boarded the Japanese liner Tamba Maru today and started on the last leg of his tour around the world. Americans and Japanese crowded about the wharf in an effort to get a well-deserved glimpse of the naval hero. When Admiral Togo mounted the gangplank the crowd cheered vociferously and he smilingly bowed his acknowledgments.

Akerman of Hampton Falls auditor. The reunion will be held in the latter part of August 1912, at a place to be selected by the officers.

The young boys in the vicinity of Commercial street are wondering where they can play ball. They have been driven from the open lot nearby, and then took to the street, but now on complaint of a resident, a sign has been put up to the effect that they will be arrested and fined $5 if found playing in the street.

The urgent need of a public playground can be seen in all parts of our village, and it would seem that the town might do worse than to set aside some place for the boys to play unhindered.

THE HERALD'S PRIZE DRAWING

Much interest is evinced in the HERALD'S DRAWING CONTEST, and sketches from young HERALD readers are pouring in rapidly. The subject of last week's cartoon was Sherman, and the committee in whose hands the selection of the best sketch rests will announce their decision next Tuesday.

On Friday of this week the subject of the cartoon will be Speaker Reed of Maine. Commenting on this particular drawing, Mr. Reed is quoted as saying in a friendly way to Mr. Davenport: "Your picture of me is not wildly flattering, but awfully funny."

Mr. Davenport considers the forthright sketch of the "Czar" one of his best, in that the expression of the face and the lines of the body are true to this great personality of the early 90s.

The Murfree Case

A Woman's Faithfulness Saved the Day

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The assistant district attorney pushed back his chair with a gesture of weariness. "Is that all, Jackson?" he asked of the clerk at his elbow.

"Here are the papers in the Murfree case, Mr. Chalmers," replied the man, thrusting a sheaf of papers before his superior. "Mr. Lantry was working on them when he was stricken, and he made memoranda of all the most important."

"Very well; leave them on my desk, and I will go over the matter this evening."

When he was alone Chalmers arose and paced the floor with quick, impatient strides. His broad shoulders hunched dependently and his genial face was graven in lines of care as he went to and fro.

The day had been full of disagreeable happenings. He had returned that morning from a long trip abroad to find his chief stricken with apoplexy on the eve of a great legal fight. The principal witness in this case was a rich man, James White Murfree, and it happened that Murfree was the man who had run a race with Chalmers for the hand and heart of Alice Leigh, and Murfree, with the money, had won.

Suddenly the outer door of his office swung open and closed. A tall man, clad in a richly furrowed overcoat, walked swiftly to his desk and looked down at him with the patronizing stare of James White Murfree.

Chalmers motioned toward a chair and challenged the other's errand with frank inquiry in his brown eyes.

Murfree's long, pale face did not change color under the scrutiny. His old gray eyes surveyed the younger man with a speculative interest.

"HAVE YOU SEEN THE PAPERS?"

"Know why I'm here?" asked Murfree suddenly.

Chalmers nodded curtly. "Not hard to conjecture."

"No use tackling old Lantry, even if he had not crumpled up on the job—heard you were here and they sent me around."

"Nothing doing," remarked Chalmers grimly.

"Now, see here, Chalmers," urged the millionaire. "This affair's likely to go my way, anyhow, and it won't need any pushing in either direction for you to help me along. Just restrain yourself from being so blundering conscientious and—"

Chalmers held up a hand. "No use, Murfree. I'd rather it was somebody else had the job, but if I take it—I'll do the square thing, you can bank on that."

"It's a matter of a cool million for you," suggested Murfree, his sharp eyes greedily noting the papers Chalmers was gathering together. "Don't be a fool—it will make you a rich man for life."

"Remember, Murfree, that it's no use for you to strain your mental forces trying to understand my motives for keeping my hands clean in such matters as yours. When you picked me out for bribery you got hold of the wrong man."

Murfree arose with a harsh laugh. "I'll give you time to think it over, Chalmers. Don't be a fool. I'm coming back at 8 o'clock for your answer. If you agree, all you've got to do is to lose that bunch of ineffectual evidence—oh, I'll admit it is on me—where I can pick it up, and I'll turn over government bonds for ten hundred thousand. So long!"

The door closed behind his swaggering form, and Chalmers sat down with bent head, staring blankly at the papers on his desk. When Murfree's punishment had been meted out, then would another wrong against the people be avenged. Personally there was small satisfaction in the best of his mind.

Murfree had looked well. A million dollars was a tempting morsel to dangle before the eyes of a man who had of Murfree had sneeringly said, worked his way up from a penniless boyhood to the honorable position he now held.

Would he exchange his by no means large income for the million? If he fought Murfree and Murfree won in the end, then Murfree could "break" the assistant district attorney.

It was a tempting proposition, and Chalmers hesitated. His head dropped lower until his face was quite hidden in his hands. There was no sound save the ticking of the clock and a distant roar of traffic from the street far below.

He was a lonely man. He lived at his club, and it was his lot to spend long evenings there, and his wistful eyes would often follow the careless and reluctant home going of easy-natured men.

The inner door opened softly and his secretary stood on the threshold. She was young and straight and slim, with soft, steady dark eyes and a mist of dusky hair which emphasized the pallor of her cheeks and the scarlet of her lips.

She looked at the bent head of her employer with strange intensity; then with a quick movement she leaned forward and removed the packet of documents in the case of the state versus James Murfree at once.

Instantly she regained her own office, she sat down before a desk and folded and addressed letters with careful precision. Her cheeks were flushed now, and a pulse beat quickly in her pretty throat above the frill of white ruching.

After awhile the outer door opened again and Murfree's harsh voice broke the silence. The girl listened breathlessly.

There was the sound of a scraping chair, a long interval of silence and folded and addressed letters with careful precision. Her cheeks were flushed now, and a pulse beat quickly in her pretty throat above the frill of white ruching.

CRAZY KING LOUIS WILL

His Part in the Pitiful Tragedy at Lake Stranberg.

SLEW HIS FRIEND AND DIED.

The Mad Bavarian Monarch Beat Faithful Dr. von Gudden to Death Before Heart Disease Stopped His Own Dash For Liberty.

For months preceding the tragedy on June 13, 1886, that ended his life King Louis II. of Bavaria had revealed many unmistakable signs of mental derangement. He heard mysterious voices in the air around him and believed that he was constantly pursued by dangerous enemies. He withdrew entirely from the world, his cabinet ministers were unable to obtain access to him, and his domestic servants were forbidden to look at his face, being compelled to approach him with averted eyes. The old valet Meier was obliged to don a mask to cover his features whenever he went near the king, and many other strange things happened at the magnificent palace which Louis had built for himself with reckless extravagance.

Wearing his crown and purple royal mantle, with the scepter of sovereignty in his hand, King Louis would wander through the rooms of his castles at night, conversing with imaginary guests, for the most part with the ghosts of King Louis XIV. of France and Queen Marie Antoinette. Frequently places were laid at his table for their disembodied spirits.

The king's debts brought matters to a crisis and necessitated the intervention of the Bavarian government. Most of the royal liabilities had been contracted through the construction and decoration of the famous three castles, and several creditors threatened to initiate proceedings to recover their money. King Louis requested the government to introduce a bill in the Bavarian legislature granting his property immunity from seizure for debts, and when his ministers refused this unreasonable demand he tried to borrow money from all sorts and conditions of people.

In April, 1886, the Bavarian chamber refused to sanction the payment of the king's debts from the public treasury, and a few days later the cabinet addressed a respectful petition to Louis to curtail his expenditures. King Louis responded by dismissing the whole cabinet and nominating a new ministry, at the head of which he placed his own barber.

This irresponsible act brought matters to a head. A commission of medical experts, under the presidency of Dr. von Gudden, pronounced the king to be incurably insane and incapable of ruling, and a deputation under Baron von Crailsheim was dispatched from Munich to the castle where Louis was in residence to inform his majesty of his dethronement. The king had Baron von Crailsheim and all the members of the deputation arrested.

Then Dr. von Gudden proceeded to Neuschwanstein castle, where to all outward appearances he succeeded in persuading the king to submit to his dethronement and to retire to Berg castle, near the shores of Lake Stranberg, where the final tragedy was enacted. The king was escorted to Berg castle by Dr. von Gudden, another medical man, Dr. Mueller, and several trained attendants, and he seemed to acquiesce in the arrangement that he should remain there for a year under close supervision.

Dr. von Gudden, misled by appearances, telegraphed to Munich that his royal patient was "as obedient as a child," and at dinner that evening he promised to take the king for a walk in the park. His assistant, Dr. Mueller, warned him that it would be dangerous to go alone with the king and urged him to allow an attendant to accompany them, or at least to follow them at a discreet distance, but Dr. von Gudden disregarded the young man's advice and paid the penalty with his life. It was a Sunday evening, and a general feeling of uneasiness prevailed among those who had remained at the castle when the king and Dr. von Gudden failed to reappear after an hour had elapsed. Search parties were organized, and during the night one of the royal footmen found the king's hat, coat and overcoat close to the bank of the lake and Dr. von Gudden's umbrella close by on the ground. The bodies of the king and his physician were found not far from the shore of the lake, in shallow water, both heads projecting above the surface. Dr. von Gudden's face and head bore the marks of heavy blows which the king, a man of immensely powerful build, had showered upon him.

The position of the bodies and the articles of clothing found near them made it possible to surmise, with probable accuracy, the details of the tragedy. It is likely that the king intended to escape from his prison—for as such he regarded the castle in which he was kept as a madman—and that he dived himself of overcoat and coat to swim across the lake. Dr. von Gudden, it appears, closed with him at the water's edge and tried to prevent his flight, but the king killed him and died from heart disease at the moment when he was on the point of beginning his swim for liberty. The post-mortem examination revealed that neither had died from drowning, but the king from heart failure and Dr. von Gudden from the injuries inflicted on him in the struggle—Berlin Cor. St. James' Gazette.

REVOLUTIONIZE WARFARE

A Russian naval engineer named Shuravieff has prepared the plans of what promises to be an epoch-making ship of war. It is nothing less than a large seaborne protected cruiser which will be capable of submersion in three minutes. Whereas Great Britain, France and Germany are only just now approaching the 1000-ton mark in submarine construction, the vessel designed by M. Shuravieff will displace when submerged no less than 5435 tons. This is slightly in excess of the displacement of the second-class cruisers now being completed for the British fleet.

The principal dimensions of this submarine cruiser, according to the designs have been submitted to the Russian naval authorities, are as follows: Length between perpendiculars, 400.25 feet; beam, 34.2 feet and draught, when steaming on the surface 22.25 feet. The designer has made provision for either turbines or internal combustion engines to be used for surface work but when submerged motors would of course have to be used exclusively. When on the surface the horse-power developed would be 18,000, giving a maximum speed of twenty-five knots, while in the submerged condition the horse-power will be only 4400 and the corresponding speed fourteen knots.

A very extensive radius of action is provided for the oil fuel capacity is 355 tons, and it is stated that this would be sufficient to enable the vessel to cover a distance of 18,000 miles (sic) when steaming on the surface at eleven knots, or 1250 miles at twenty-one knots, or 750 miles at the maximum speed of twenty-five knots. When travelling under water the radius would be 275 miles at six knots, eighty miles at ten knots, or twenty-one miles at the full speed of fourteen knots. When it is pointed out that no submarine, yet built has a greater steaming radius than 2,000 miles, a greater surface speed than sixteen knots or a greater submerged speed than ten knots it will be understood what a revelation in submarine construction and possibly also in naval warfare this new vessel would entail.

One of the most remarkable features about the ship, however is the armament with which it is proposed to equip her. In a vessel primarily designed to act as a submarine torpedo boat it is natural that the torpedo equipment should hold the first place. In this Russian ship provision is made for thirty torpedo tubes. Several foreign boats have six or seven tubes, but three is the largest number so far mounted in British submarines.

It is proposed to arm the vessel with five 4.7-inch quick-firing guns. The guns would be mounted on collapsible mountings, so that while they could be easily erected when the ship was steaming on the surface they could with equal ease be stowed away below the decks when he was about to be submerged. This idea is not altogether new, as several earlier Russian submarines carried one or two small guns, and the experiment is also being tried with small quick-firers in a number of vessels now under construction for the navies of Great Britain and Germany. Even this, however, does not end the fighting equipment of this remarkable ship. She will be fitted with elaborate apparatus for the sowing of mines while under water, and for this purpose will be equipped with 120 "torpilles de blocus" or blockade mines.

The possibilities of such a vessel as this are enormous and it is quite likely that she heralds the dawn of an era in which warships of all types will be capable of navigating on the surface or in the submerged condition. It is well known that the British Admiralty has in its possession designs of a "semi-submersible battleship"—a capital ship so constructed that when going into action her curved armored decks can be almost totally submerged. As a matter of fact the superiority of the gun over armor has of late become so pronounced that architects are forced to look elsewhere for means to protect ships from gun fire and the submersion of the hull, leaving only a minute portion—with of course towers—showing, naturally offers itself as one way out of the difficulty. This submarine cruiser could act at a great distance from its base and would be of incalculable value in blockade work. She could steal into a harbor unperceived, put every vessel inside out of action with her unprecedented torpedo armament, and returning to the harbor mouth, sow her mines in the fairway so that it would be impossible for any vessel within to make an exit. The Russian submarine cruiser is intended to carry 120 mines and 60 torpedoes two for each tube.

The designer has calculated the following weights for the cruiser: Hull and fittings, 1959.5 tons; armor (deck and internal), 337 tons; surface propelling machinery 530 tons; submerged propelling machinery, 590 tons; auxiliary machinery, 204 tons; torpedoes and discharge tubes, 110 tons; guns mountings and ammunition, 125 tons; mines, 75 tons; stores and water, 105 tons; fuel, 356 tons; crew, 24 tons and miscellaneous, 90.5 tons. The reserve of buoyancy would be considerable, amounting to 20.8 per cent of the total displacement of the ship. It will be interesting to compare this design with that of the British protected cruisers of the Dartmouth class now running their trials:

Dartmouth—Length, 430 feet beam, 43.5 feet; draught, 15.5 feet; tonnage 5,250; horse-power, 23,000; speed knots, 25; armament, eight 6 in.; torpedo tubes, 2.

Submarine Cruiser—Length, 440.25 feet; beam, 34.1 feet; draught, 22.25 feet (on surface); tonnage, 4,500 (on surface) and 5,435 (submerged); horse-power, 18,000 (surface); speed knots, 25 (surface); armament, five 4.7 in.; torpedo tubes, 30.

It will be seen that even as a surface gun-carrying ship the Russian vessel would not be greatly inferior to the Dartmouths; and when to her abilities in this direction are added her extraordinary torpedo armament and her capacity for disappearing under water in three minutes, her superiority becomes unquestionable. Unfortunately no indication of the probable cost of the submarine cruiser is available.

Washington Monument Bent by Heat.
The towering Washington monument, solid as it is, cannot resist the heat of the sun poured on its southern side on a sultry summer day without a slight bending of the gigantic shaft, which is rendered perceptible by means of a copper wire 174 feet long hanging in the center of the structure and carrying a plummet suspended in a vessel of water. At noon in summer the apex of the monument, 550 feet above the ground, is shifted by expansion of the stone a few hundredths of an inch toward the north. High winds cause perceptible motions of the plummet, and in still weather delicate vibrations of the crust of the earth otherwise unperceived are registered by it.

Blood Thicker Than Some Water.
"Blood is thicker than water"—though not much thicker—and not so thick as sea water. The water of the ocean contains thirty-five parts of saline material a thousand, while the vital fluid of the human body contains but seven parts a thousand or one-fifth as much. In the human body each of its myriads of cells is bathed with this seven-tenths per cent saline fluid—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

Trimmed the Princes.
King George is particular regarding the training of his sons. Two of the younger boys not long ago were riding near his majesty when the cavalcade passed men who were working on the road. The men removed their hats, and the king at once doffed his own hat. His majesty noticed that the boys in the enthusiasm of their gallop had not followed his example. He immediately called a halt, took the princes back to the workmen and ordered them to remove their hats.

The Elbe Going Dry.
The river Elbe is going dry, says a report from Teischen-Bodebach, in Bohemia. The "famine rocks" in the river bed, called so because they were never seen except when great droughts caused much suffering, are now visible. A part of the Teischen bridge, which in normal water conditions is submerged, now stands high and dry, and the low water marks bearing the dates 1616, 1636, 1707, 1716 and 1842 can be seen.

The Oldest Organ.
What is believed to be the oldest organ in existence has been discovered by a German musical director, who visited fifty-nine churches in Gotham and in a village called Sundae, came upon the remains of the quaint old instrument. The case alone has survived the test of seven centuries, and its exterior is adorned with paintings from about the year 1210.

GETTING READY FOR ENCAMPMENT

Major C. B. Hoyt of the New Hampshire coast artillery company is busy with preparations for the annual encampment which will be held next week.

The artillerymen are hoping for good weather and expect a lot of hard work. The local company have been going down to the fort at least once a week doing artillery work, so that they should be able to pass an excellent inspection. The men are taking a great interest in the work, for big gun practice is exceptionally interesting and it holds the men,

Stops Itching

Cadum, the great skin remedy, stops the itching of eczema at once, and its record of cures is a long one. Cadum is made of oil of cade, zinc oxide, washed sulphur, salicylic acid, eucalyptol, soft white petrolatum and white ceresin. Ask any doctor if there is anything better than these things for skin troubles. Cadum is equally good for psoriasis, ringworm, tetter, rash, pimples, acne, herpes, itch, etc. A single box will prove its great healing virtues to anybody.

BASE BALL PLAYER KILLED AT EXETER

"Shorty" Girard Cut in Two By Train--Was Well Known Player

The body of Edward Girard, formerly a well-known baseball player, was found on the Boston & Maine railroad tracks a hundred yards east of the Main-street crossing early Tuesday cut in two and otherwise mangled. While the manner in which he met death is not definitely known, it is generally believed that he jumped aboard a freight train somewhere between Haverhill and Exeter during the night and fell between cars. He was last seen alive in Haverhill Monday. Girard, who was about 30 years old, had not played ball for the past two or three years and his whereabouts much of that time was unknown to his mother and two brothers, who live in Exeter. He played at different times on the Haverhill club of the New England league in Nashua and in New York state. He was not married.

LAYING BRICK ON RICHARDSON AVENUE.
Work Now Well Under Way, But a Slow Job at the Best.

The contractors on the Richardson avenue job, have started laying paving brick from Lincoln avenue to South street and considerable brick has already been laid. A force of brick layers from Boston are on the job and with the concrete foundation down and the sand cushion on, the brick are laid very fast.

The work on Islington street has not been started as yet and no effort has been made to start the Market and Ceres street jobs, and it is not improbable that the Market and Ceres street may lay over until next spring.

BUDDHIST CREMATION.

The Funeral Pyre and the Disposition of the Ashes.

A Buddhist cremation is a strange and unusual event, and it is not often that a foreigner is given to witness one. I saw some of the preliminary ceremonies at a temple in south China, but found myself apparently becoming persona non grata as the time for the cremation proper approached and did not care enough about seeing it to intrude. I have since heard and read several descriptions of the gruesome ceremony.

The priests are dressed in white sackcloth, similar to that worn by the mourners at the funerals of the laymen, and their brows are bound with white bandages. The corpse, dressed in a cowl and with the hands fixed in an attitude of prayer, is placed in a sitting position in a bamboo chair and carried to the funeral pyre by some of his fellow monks, all the other monks of the monastery following in a double line. As the procession advances the walls of the monastery echo with the chanting of prayers and the tinkling of cymbals.

When the pyre is reached the bearers place the corpse upon it, and the flags are kindled by the head priest, and while the flames are mounting the others prostrate themselves in obedience to the ashes of their departed brother. When the fire is burned out the attendants collect the charred bones and place them in a cinerary urn, which is often deposited in a small shrine within the precincts of the monastery, to remain there until the ninth day of the ninth month, when the ashes are sewed up in a bag of red cloth and thrown into a sort of cemetery or monastery mausoleum.—Lewis R. Freeman in Los Angeles Times.

THE FIRST SOAP.

According to Pliny, It Was In Use Among the Gauls.

Who invented soap? According to Pliny, soap was an invention of the Gauls, who used it for giving a bright luster to the hair. He also states that it was employed by the Germans both as a medicinal and as a cleansing agent, two kinds being used—hard and soft. There is reason to believe that it was introduced into Germany by the Romans, though on this point there is some difference of opinion.

Homer tells us in the "Odyssey" that Nausicaa, daughter of Alcinoos, king of the Phaeacians, and her attendants washed clothes by treading upon them with their feet in pits of water, so that apparently she and her servants were unacquainted with the use of soap.

The fact that soap was obtainable by boiling together oily or fatty substances and alkalis was known at an early period of history, but it must be borne in mind that the substance referred to in the Old Testament and translated "soap" (Jeremiah ii, 22, "For though thou wash thee with hyssop—properly, natron—soda—and take thee much soap," and Malachi iv, 2, "For he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap") refer to the alkali itself and not to the substances prepared from oily bodies and these alkali matters.

The French word for soap (savon) is supposed to have been derived from the fact of its having been manufactured at Savona, near Genoa. The manufacture of soap began in London in 1524, before which time it was supplied by Bristol at a penny per pound. A duty was imposed on soap in 1711, but after several reductions was totally repealed in 1853.—London Journal.

The Sperm Whale's Oil Tank.
Professor R. C. Andrews believes that the oil tank in the head of the sperm whale is a provision of nature to save the monster from starvation when food is scarce. He says that his experiments show that the oil from the tank is absorbed by the whale's body at times when adequate food is unobtainable.—London Telegraph.

Anecdotes.

What is an anecdote?
An anecdote is a story of extremely uncertain age that is founded on fiction and embellished by fancy.
After lying dormant for years it is dug up and credited to an entirely innocent and unsuspecting United States senator.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

YEGGMEN SERVE "SOUP."

Its Queer Recipe Is In Possession of the Secret Service.

Here is a recipe for soup served only after nightfall, preferably in the early morning hours.
"First take about ten or a dozen impervi bz xug, crumble it up fine and put it in a pan or washbowl, then pour over it enough uswhols (either chux or laky) to cover it well. Stir it up with your hands, being careful to break all the lumps; leave it set a few minutes; then get a few yards of chuxecloth and tear it in pieces and strain the mixture through the cloth into another vessel, wring the sawdust dry and throw it away. The remains will be the blut ugx uswhols mixed. Next take the same amount of water as you used of uswhols and pour it in; leave the whole set for a few minutes."

This is the "soup" employed by yeggmens, and a single portion of it is guaranteed to open the door of the stoutest safe, provided an aperture can be made sufficiently large to pour in the stuff. The names of the ingredients are written in a crude sort of cipher commonly used for preserving such secrets. This and dozens more of the same transparency of meaning are in the possession of the United States secret service men, the police, detective agencies and others who deal with the cooks of such dishes. By a substitution of letter for letter—the first six for the last six of the alphabet, the second six for the third six, with G and N taken out of turn and made interchangeable—the cipher is easily read. "Impervi bz xug," translated, is "sticks of dynamite." "Uswhols, either chux or laky"—alcohol, either wood or pure—may be used.

The directions for serving this soup require considerable attention and the best of trained service. After the "guy eat," or advance agent of the band, has learned all that can be found out about the bank, store or post-office, its lighting, protection and the means of escape by freight train, vehicle or on foot, his companion or companions come on, avoiding notice as far as possible. "Stickups," or look-outs, guard the place while the "inside men" break into the safe. Sealing the cracks about the safe or vault door with soap, the yeggmens pour in the soup through a small hole left open at the top. The liquid flows down by locks, hinges and bolts and is set off by fuse or detonator. Blankets and covers of any kind are used to muffle the sound of the explosion and the fall of the door. Perhaps the "stickups" are forced to create a diversion outside and to frighten the citizens or mislead them while the "inside men" pick out the valuable papers and money. Who pays the check for the soup then depends upon the ingenuity of detectives.—New York Post.

EYE STRAIN.

It Has Many Symptoms and May Affect the Whole System.

Chief among the symptoms of eye strain are watering of the eye, a gluing together of the eyelids on awakening in the morning, headache, the position and character of which vary with each individual. It may be neuralgic or it may be deeply seated, as was the case with Wagner, the musician, who was complaining constantly of "the nerves of his eyes."

The headache is often replaced by an inflammation of the eyelids, especially in young and healthy persons, who also have a little conjunctivitis, with a feeling of tension or fullness in the eyes which may become real pain of a dull aching character, the eyeballs being very tender on pressure.

Sometimes there are vertigo and sickness, with dyspepsia, palpitation, and even difficulty in breathing. Sleeplessness is a very frequent symptom, due in part to the excessive flow of blood to the brain and in part to the low tone of the whole nervous system. The symptoms of eye strain appear sooner in those who lead a confined and sedentary life, who follow occupations which need a constant use of the eyes in bad or unsuitable light and in those who are debilitated from any cause. The symptoms appear later in those of coarser fiber, who pass much of their time in the open air or who follow occupations which do not need a prolonged use of the eyes for close work.—London Lancet.

ARMY AND NAVY SUFFER

Torpedo Boats Wrenched at Charleston--Garrison Buildings at Fort Moultrie, Ga., Damaged

Washington, Aug. 29.—The raging storm which swept the south Atlantic coast left its imprint on the navy. Six torpedo boats were wrenched from their moorings at the Charleston navy yard and tossed as toys high upon the beach by the 30-mile gale. Many buildings of the yard are wrecked. It is not believed that any lives were lost at the navy yard.

The commandant appealed for $22,000 as an emergency fund with which to make immediate repairs. Acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop later today authorized an expenditure of $15,000 for the urgent work.

The wireless station of the yard is out of commission and the meager official report to the department was sent by telegraph from Summerville, S. C. From the details in the dispatch it is gleaned that roofs and doors are strewn about the station and that many of the wharves and seawalls have been almost demolished.

The torpedo boats damaged form a part of the reserve torpedo fleet which is stationed at Charleston and were strongly fastened to the wharves of the inner harbor.

Maj. Gen. Wood, chief of the staff of the army, was notified tonight that 16 buildings at Fort Moultrie, Georgia, were more or less damaged by the storm. No casualties were reported.

SAYS HEBREW RELIGION IS FADING

have its origin in a civilization like ours. And we decide ourselves with the notion that we have had a satisfying religion given us from the east.

"The day of real tolerance is coming when we shall say to one another, 'How different you are from me, but how beautiful your ideas are.' America is going to be responsible for that more than any one other nation, because we have all nations and all the differences of faith assembled here in this country. America will have her own religion. The real church is the church of one member; nobody believes exactly like one other person. When we utter ourselves honestly we must vary.

"You don't realize," said Dr. Fletcher, "what America means until you have traveled over it north, south, east and west. We are struggling for utterance, and it is elemental, cosmic. America is beginning to speak. We are beginning to paint and sculpt, we are producing American music, we shall express ourselves in American fashions. America's religion will be a practical expression of the people. We will practice brotherhood instead of talking it. We have solved the question of war here in America, for we find that representatives of all nations can live side by side happily. For the first time history we shall be an entire race.

Col. Francis Keeffe secretary of the Greenacre Fellowship, which was founded by Miss Farmer, is seriously ill at the Greenacre house. Colonel Keeffe is supervisor of public buildings of the state of Maine. The managers and pupils of the Lanier camp will disperse this year without giving a public entertainment. It is said that the camp will celebrate its anniversary next year and that the plans for celebration are two years old.

THEY ARE DISAPPOINTED

Baseball fans in Concord were disappointed to learn today that on account of the engagement of two of their men with another team, the Portsmouth A. C. would not be able to meet the champions of the local Sunset League Labor day at Portsmouth, as it was hoped, and it is now believed that two games will take place on the Wednesday and Saturday following Labor day one, on each team's home grounds. In case this plan is carried out, Concord fans will turn out in greater numbers than those which ever witnessed a New England league game, to see both the game here and that at Portsmouth.

Tha. October, 1917, of the Concord Capt. will have a long criminal docket. County Solicitor Gupill has some big cases to present.

IT'S UP TO THEM

The manager of one of the Isles of Shoals hotels has attached a steamer of the Portsmouth-Shoals line for damages alleged to have been sustained through loss of patronage by the steamer's breakdown. If many owners of coast summer hotels took that view, there would be keepers on most boats belonging to shore lines.

NAVY YARD

We May See Her
The Chinese cruiser Hai Chi will shortly leave Plymouth, England, for American waters in her cruise around the world. She will visit Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Newport and perhaps Portsmouth.

Detroit May be a Coal Barge
The cruiser Detroit, which was a member of the much-admired White Squadron not many years ago, and repaired here after the battle of Manila Bay, is now owned by a Brooklyn man who thinks of turning it into a coal barge. The life of a modern battleship is not much longer than the life of a lucky cat.

No Dead Ones on the Paducah
The baseball men of the gunboat Paducah object to the crew of the Petrel throwing out their chest and claiming the championship of the gunboat fleet on the diamond. Where and how they attacked this title is somewhat of a puzzle to the ships company of the Paducah who do not hesitate to say that they can dig out a team half of them from the sick bay and defeat these would be champions. They also have lots of spare cash that goes with the game if the Petrel men care to talk it over.

Going to Try It in Machinery Division

A board has been appointed at the yard to proceed with the installation of the planning system in the machinery division which has for some time been in operation in the hull division.

The Last From England

The navy department is purchasing 183 torpedoes of the Whitehead Torpedo Company of England, and Commander V. O. Chase, U. S. N., has gone abroad to act as inspector. It is expected that this will be the last order which this government will be obliged to place abroad, as the American facilities for producing torpedoes should be equal to the demand in that direction. The present output of the naval torpedo factory at Newport is constantly increasing and there is a chance of development of the manufacture under contract.

Quits the Service

Ensign Garelinsky of the gunboat Wheeling who recently resigned from the service, was detached from that vessel today.

In the Local Hospital

John Foden of the yard electrical force is confined to the Portsmouth Hospital, where a surgical operation was performed on Tuesday, necessary for the removal of an inflamed ulcer.

More Men for the Hull

Six all around machinists and one general helper were called in the hull division today.

Doing Surface Blasting

Divers and other workmen of the Massachusetts Contracting Company are engaged in the work of surface blasting in the Exeter river.

A BUSY PRIEST

Rev. Father Cavanaugh, formerly of this city, doing excellent work in the North Country

Rev. Jeremiah Buckley of the Manchester diocese, has been assigned as assistant to the Rev. William J. Cavanaugh, formerly of this parish, at North Stratford. Since the assignment of Father Buckley to the North country Father Cavanaugh has added two more missions, that of Percy and Milan, N. H., which gives him plenty of mountain territory to cover in his religious duties.
